WHO I AM

My name is Matt and I am a Web Architect located in Washington, DC. For over ten years, I have worked to develop, design and distribute content.

Most of my time has been spent working for news companies and online publishers. This has provided me with a wealth of knowledge into how to find creative and different ways to bridge a large gap between 'old' and 'new'.

WORK EXPERIENCE

THE WASHINGTON POST
Lead Developer 2011- current

As a Lead Developer, my primary focus is researching, suggesting and guiding the technical side of tools and applications.

This includes testing and implementing new technologies, writing, clean and concise code, as well mentoring and interacting other developers to ensure that the business objective and a scalable development objective are both met.

Key Achievments:
- Migration of legacy and new applications to the cloud.
- Implemented CI and CD methods across multiple applications.
- Lead developer for javascript software as a service application.
- Front end lead for self-service advertising application.
- Developed HTML 5 internal campaign tool.

KIPLINGER'S PERSONAL FINANCE
Web Development Manager, 2010-2011

I provided leadership of web development projects from conception to completion, managed development resources and enhanced the overall experience and presentation of Kiplinger's web presence.

Key Achievments:
- Led development of editorial scheduling tool.
- Proposed and implemented website commenting system.
- Created interactive financial microsite.

DUAL TONE MEDIA
Web Developer & Designer, 2007-2010

Operated a web architecture firm that provided custom web solutions for a variety of clients.

Led multiple web based projects that include:
- Creation of web services to interface with point of sale systems.
- Using third party databases to populate pages.
- Developing custom Content Management Systems for clients.
